

CLE Credit for Speakers/Presenters

- CA – 4X actual speaking time for first presentation (1X actual speaking time for subsequent presentations of same program).
- CO – Credit may be earned through teaching an accredited CLE program. In addition, credit may be earned through teaching a non-accredited CLE program that contributes to the continuing legal education of the applicant and other lawyers or judges. A registered lawyer or judge may earn a maximum of four CLE credit hours for every 50 minutes spent in teaching a CLE activity, inclusive of preparation time. Credit for teaching will be prorated accordingly.
- FL – Other than attending approved CLE courses, credit may be earned by:
 - 1) Lecturing at an approved CLE program
 - 2) Serving as a workshop leader or panel member
 - 3) Writing and publishing in a professional publication or journal
 - 4) Teaching (graduate law or law school courses)
 - 5) University attendance (graduate law or law school courses)
- GA – Attorneys in Georgia may earn credit for non-paid teaching activities. Georgia attorneys earn 3 credits for every hour of presentation. These activities must first be approved by the Commission on Continuing Lawyer Competency.
- IL – Teaching at CLE courses/activities during the two-year reporting term, subject to the following:
 - (i) Credit may be earned for teaching in an approved CLE course or activity. Presentations shall be counted at the full hour or fraction thereof for the initial presentation; a repeat presentation of the same material shall be counted at one-half; no further hours may be earned for additional presentations of the same material.
 - (ii) Time spent in preparation for a presentation at an approved CLE activity shall be counted at six times the actual presentation time.
- MA – No MCLE requirement
- MI – No MCLE requirement
- MN – Credit for teaching in an approved, live (not previously recorded) course shall be awarded to presenting faculty on the basis of one credit for each 60 minutes spent by the faculty preparing the presentation and materials for the course and teaching the course. No credit shall be awarded for teaching directed primarily to persons preparing for admission to practice law.
- NV – For every actual one (1) hour of instruction, up to three (3) credits may be allocated for preparation. Multiple presentations involving the same material and program matter are not entitled to duplicate credit. Programs which are updated from previous presentations may qualify for approval to the extent time was expended preparing for and providing the updated presentation.

- NY – For speaking or teaching at an accredited CLE activity you may earn 3 CLE credit hours for each 50 minutes of your presentation, and you may earn 3 credits for each 50 minutes of your participation on the panel. A moderator earns 1 credit for each 50 minutes of participation. No additional credit is available for preparation time for any of these activities.
- PA – Credit for teaching activities will be given on the basis of two (2) hours credit for each hour of presentation where the applicant has prepared quality written materials for use in the presentation. Credit for repeat presentations or presentations without such materials will be given only for the actual time of presentation.
- TX – Credit may be earned through teaching or participating in an accredited CLE activity. Credit shall be granted for preparation time and presentation time, including preparation credit for repeated presentations. Presentation and preparation time will qualify for CLE credit on the basis of hour-for-hour credit for each hour spent in preparation and the actual time of presentation. Credit for repeat presentations shall qualify for additional time spent in preparation only.
- WA – Beyond the above traditional continuing legal education activities, lawyers can earn credit by participating in any of the following activities:
Preparation time for a teacher, presenter, or panelist of an approved activity at the rate of up to 5 credits per hour of presentation time, provided that the presentation time is at least 30 minutes in duration.